

Preface

It is a great pleasure to be able to introduce the thirty-fourth volume in the series of Specialist Periodical Reports on the 'Spectroscopic Properties of Inorganic and Organometallic Compounds'. The series represents an unequalled source of accessible information on an area of chemistry which continues to grow in extent and importance.

The Reporters are to be congratulated on producing accounts of their chosen fields which cover the most significant published work in a manner which is both timely, readable and accessible.

Both the Reporters and the editorial staff at the Royal Society of Chemistry have made my job very easy!

George Davidson

September 2001

