Introduction

The Royal Society of Chemistry was established in 1980 by the merger of The Chemical Society and The Royal Institute of Chemistry. It traces its history to the first meeting of the Chemical Society of London held on 30 March 1841. The Chemical Society received its first Charter in 1848. The Institute of Chemistry of Great Britain and Ireland was established in 1877 and was granted a Charter in 1885. By Royal Command the Institute became The Royal Institute of Chemistry in 1944. The Society for Analytical Chemistry, established in 1874 as the Society for Public Analysts, and the Faraday Society, founded in 1903, merged with the Chemical Society in 1971.

The Royal Society of Chemistry's Charter was granted by Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II in 1980.

The Charter

ELIZABETH THE SECOND by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and of Our other Realms and Territories Queen, Head of the Commonwealth, Defender of the Faith:

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME, GREETING!

WHEREAS by an humble Petition The Chemical Society and The Royal Institute of Chemistry (hereinafter called "the Institute") have represented unto Us:

- (a) that The Chemical Society was incorporated by Royal Charter granted in the year of our Lord One thousand eight hundred and forty-eight (hereinafter called "the Original Charter") having as its object the general advancement of chemical science and is now constituted according to the Original Charter and a Charter supplemental thereto granted in the year One thousand nine hundred and twenty (hereinafter called "the Supplemental Charter");
- (b) that The Institute was incorporated under the title of The Institute of Chemistry by Royal Charter granted in the year One thousand eight hundred and eighty-five to achieve the like object by encouraging persons practising in various fields of chemical science and in particular by the provision of means whereby the professional competence of those who had been suitably trained and were considered competent so to practise might be readily recognised by the public and was by virtue of certain Charters supplemental thereto granted the title of "The Royal Institute of Chemistry" and in addition to its function as a learned society was charged with the duty of ensuring that its corporate members should have such training and qualifications as might from time to time be prescribed, and was authorised to maintain a high standard of scientific and practical efficiency by enforcing strict rules of membership, and to grant certificates of competency in the science and practice of chemistry;
- (c) that both bodies have continuously fulfilled their respective objects and duties in the manner prescribed and have found that the general advancement of chemical science has been better achieved by collaboration and co-ordination of their activities as learned societies so that at this present time all members of the Institute are eligible to become and the great majority are members of The Chemical Society, the Institute having retained its qualifying and examining functions;
- (d) that chemical science would be further advanced and promoted if the activities of the respective bodies were wholly integrated in one body and such representations are strengthened by the furtherance of the object of The Chemical Society which has resulted from its amalgamation by mutual consent with The Faraday Society and The Society for Analytical Chemistry respectively, the terms of such amalgamation being set out in Agreements both dated the thirty-first day of January in the year One thousand nine hundred and seventy-one;
- (e) that continuously throughout its existence The Chemical Society has carried out the object of the Original Charter and now wishes to continue to do so together with the functions of the Institute in qualifying and registering those competent to practise chemistry as a profession; that time has overtaken many of the provisions of the Original Charter and the Supplemental Charter and it is desirable for the better performance of its object together with the functions heretofore performed by the Institute that they should be revoked save with respect to the incorporation of The Chemical Society and replaced by a Charter better fitted to that end and to the needs of this present time;
- (f) that in the event of the said Petition of The Chemical Society and the Institute being complied with, the Institute proposes to petition Us to accept a surrender of the several Charters granted to it.

The Charter

NOW, THEREFORE KNOW YE that We having taken the said Petition into Our Royal consideration, of Our especial grace, certain knowledge and mere motion have granted and declared and by these Presents for Us, Our Heirs and Successors are graciously pleased to grant and declare as follows:

1. The provisions of the Original Charter (except in so far as they incorporate The Chemical Society and confer upon it perpetual succession and a Common Seal) and the Supplemental Charter shall with effect from the first day of June One thousand nine hundred and eighty (hereinafter referred to as "the Effective Date") be revoked, but nothing in this revocation shall affect the validity or legality of any act, deed or thing already done or executed thereunder.
2. The persons who are on the Effective Date members of The Chemical Society, all corporate and non-corporate members of the Institute not then members of The Chemical Society and all such persons as may thereafter become members thereof and their successors shall for ever thereafter (so long as they shall remain such members) continue to be one body corporate and politic by the name of "The Royal Society of Chemistry" (hereinafter referred to as "the Society") and by the same name shall as theretofore have perpetual succession and a Common Seal with power to break, alter and make anew the said Seal from time to time at their will and pleasure and by the same name shall and may implead and be impleaded in all Courts and in all manner of actions and suits and shall have power to do all other matters and things incidental or appertaining to a body corporate.
3. The object for which the Society is constituted is the general advancement of chemical science and its application and for that purpose:
 - (i) to foster and encourage the growth and application of such science by the dissemination of chemical knowledge;
 - (ii) to establish, uphold and advance the standards of qualification, competence and conduct of those who practise chemistry as a profession;
 - (iii) to serve the public interest by acting in an advisory, consultative or representative capacity in matters relating to the science and practice of chemistry; and
 - (iv) to advance the aims and objectives of members of the Society so far as they relate to the advancement of the science or practice of chemistry.
4. There shall be a Council of the Society (hereinafter referred to as "the Council") consisting of such number of members with such qualifications and to be elected or constituted as members of the Council in such manner and to hold office for such period and on such terms as to re-election or otherwise as the By-laws for the time being of the Society (hereinafter referred to as "the By-laws") shall prescribe.

6. There shall be a President and such other Officers of the Society with such functions, tenure and terms of office as the By-laws may prescribe. The revocation of the original Charter and the Supplemental Charter shall not affect the constitution of the Council and all members of the Council and other Officers of The Chemical Society shall remain in office as heretofore until a new Council is elected in accordance with the By-laws at the first Annual General Meeting following the date of this Our Charter.
7. The membership of the Society shall be divided into such categories as the By-laws may from time to time provide.
8. The By-laws may also make provision for the establishment or recognition of additional groups of individuals associated with the Society but who shall not by virtue of their membership of such groups be members of the Society.
9. (Deleted)
10. The qualifications, method and terms of admission, privileges and obligations including liability to expulsion or suspension of members shall be such as the By-laws shall prescribe.

The Council may cause examinations to be held for applicants for admission to membership in any category for which an examination is specified in regulations made under the By-laws and may organise other examinations in such subjects and manner as it thinks fit. The Council may also issue formal documents certifying competency in chemistry or in any branch or specialised application of chemistry and may maintain registers of persons whose competency has been so certified.

13. The property of the Society shall be applied solely towards the object of the Society as hereinbefore defined.
14. 15. (i) The members of the Society shall have no personal claim on the property of the Society and no portion of such property shall be paid or transferred to any person who at any time is or has been a member of the Society provided that nothing herein contained shall prevent the payment in good faith of remuneration in return for any services rendered to the Society by a member or remuneration to any trustee in accordance with Article 15(ii) below or the re-imbursment of out-of-pocket expenses properly incurred or prevent the giving of prizes or scholarships to members or prevent the payment of interest on money borrowed by the Society from members at a rate not exceeding one per centum above the Bank of England's minimum lending rate.

No poll shall be directed or demanded on the election of a Chairman or on a question of adjournment. Unless a poll be so directed or demanded a declaration by the Chairman that a motion has on a show of hands been carried or carried by a particular majority, or lost, shall be sufficient evidence of the decision of the meeting. A demand for a poll shall not invalidate any other business of the meeting.
