

Dear Colleague

Happy New Year, and welcome to the first issue of RSC Notes for 2010. In this issue:

- Journal news
- Renewals and grace period
- Usage statistics and the RSC eBook Collection
- Coming soon ...

You are welcome to contact us if you have any comments, questions or feedback.

Kind regards
Valerie Simpson
Product Marketing Manager

PS Please pass this on to any colleagues who you think would be interested - they can also sign up to receive RSC Notes via our new E-alerts registration page .

Journal news

Polymer Chemistry, the first of RSC Publishing's new journals for 2010, has recently published its first articles online. Free institutional online access is available to all 2010 and 2011 content, allowing you and your users to fully evaluate the content. Don't miss out - sign up for this and other new journal content on our website.

Energy & Environmental Science, launched in 2008, has now reached the end of the free access period. To continue access, a subscription is now required (unless you subscribe to Package A or A+, which includes this journal).

Renewals and gracing period

Online access for RSC journal customers who have not yet renewed their subscriptions will be extended until the end of January. No further printed journals will be mailed to customers whose print subscriptions have lapsed. Please visit our website for further information or contact the Sales team .

Usage statistics for RSC eBook Collection now available

We're happy to say that usage statistics are now available for the RSC eBook Collection through our usage stats provider, MPS Insight. The stats cover usage from January 2009 onwards. To view, simply log on to the MPS website in the usual way, and select COUNTER Book Report 2 on the Usage Report page.

If you have not yet registered your institution for usage statistics, you can find further information about how to obtain reports, and the types of report available, on our website.

Coming soon ...

...the beta launch of a powerful new integrated content delivery platform from the RSC. The new online resource will support multiple content types and offers rich functionality, powerful searching, simple browsing and intuitive navigation. A special edition of RSC Notes will be sent out next month with detailed information for librarians and information specialists.
