Supplementary Information:

Self-assembled graphene-constructed hollow Fe₂O₃ spheres with controllable size for high lithium storage

Yanwei Chen, Ming'an Zhou, Jianzhong Jiang, Jinzuan Wang, Jun Zhu, Sheng Han*

*aSchool of Chemical and Environmental Engineering, Shanghai Institute of Technology, 201418, Shanghai, China

Figure S1. TGA of 100nm GHFs.

Figure S2. Cycling performance of GHFs (100nm) at the current density of 100 mAg⁻¹
Figure S3. XRD patterns of GHFs after TGA

Figure S4. Typical FESEM image of GHFs revealing graphene-constructed structure and Fe2O3 particle diameter of (a) 50 nm, (b) 100 nm, (c) 300 nm, (d) 400 nm, (e) 700 nm, (f) 2000 nm.
Figure S5. SEM of Fe(OH)$_3$/GO dialyzed before hydrothermal treatment.