A new "zero-strain" material for electrochemical lithium insertion

Yunpeng Gu, Kouji Taniguchi, Ryosuke Tajima, Shin-ichi Nishimura, Daisuke Hashizume, Atsuo Yamada and Hidenori Takagi

Department of Advanced Materials Science, The University of Tokyo, Kashiwa 277-8561, Japan.
Department of Physics, The University of Tokyo, Tokyo 113-0033, Japan. Fax: +81-3-5841-4619; Tel: +81-3-5841-4619; E-mail: taniguchi@phys.s.u-tokyo.ac.jp
Department of Chemical System Engineering, The University of Tokyo, Tokyo 113-8656, Japan.
Advanced Science Institute, RIKEN, Wako 351-0198, Japan.

Figure S1. Electrochemical Li extraction and insertion for LiRhO$_2$. The cell voltage was initially charged to 4.8 V (vs Li/Li$^+$), and then the discharge test was performed between 4.8 V and 2.0 V at a constant current density of 10 mA g$^{-1}$. 