NASAL DRUG DELIVERY

Explore this Rapidly Developing Area of Drug Delivery

EXHIBITORS INCLUDE:

Valois
Pharmaceutical Division

Pfeiffer

REXAM

Increase your networking opportunity by attending the drinks reception

Programme to include:

- Anatomy and Physiology of the Nose and Sinuses
- The Future of Nasal Fentanyl: Pro and Cons of the Products Entering the Market
- Nasal Drugs to Treat Nasal Disorders
- Nasal Vaccines
- Nose to Brain Transport of Drugs - Does Deposition Matter?
- Effective and Safe Excipients in Nasal Drug Delivery
- Alternatives to Animal Testing for the Safety Evaluation of Nasal Drug Delivery Systems
- Recent Findings in the Pharmacokinetics of Nasal Drugs
- Testing of Nasal Sprays from a Regulatory Perspective
- Enhancing the In-Vitro Assessment of Nasal Sprays
- Intranasal Delivery of Dry Powder Vaccines
- New Nasal Sinus Drug Delivery Device
- Nasal Drug Delivery Systems

Co-chairmen:

Phil Seeney Member of the Drug Delivery Group, PA Consulting Group, UK

Professor Frans W H M Merkus Emeritus Professor of Biopharmaceutics, Leiden University, The Netherlands & Chairman of Innoscience Technology, Belgium

With a panel of key opinion leaders including:

Professor Valerie Lund Royal Free University College Hospital, London, UK

Professor Michael Benninger Henry Ford Medical Systems, USA

Professor Anthony Hickey University of North Carolina School of Pharmacy, USA

MANAGEMENT

INTRODUCTION

Nasal drug delivery has always been a key development area for both pharmaceutical and device development companies, presenting many opportunities and challenges. The physiology of the nose presents obstacles, but offers a promising route for systemic delivery of numerous therapies and debatably a drug delivery route to the brain. Vaccine delivery via the nose has yet to meet the promised potential but is this changing? Just how difficult is it to bring a product to market and how is In-Vitro testing of nasal products changing? Can drugs be delivered via the nose to the brain and if so, does deposition matter?

Are there such things as safe excipients and are there alternatives to animal testing for safety evaluation? How does all this fit within the regulatory environment? This conference seeks to explore these and other questions within the field of nasal drug delivery reviewing interesting new data. Leading authorities in nasal drug delivery and associated technologies will cover aspects of physiology, nasal anatomy, nasal delivery to the brain, vaccination via the nose, nasal delivery to the sinuses, the regulation of nasal products and much more. In addition, case histories of existing/in development products/delivery systems will be explored.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND THIS EVENT

Managing Directors, Medical Directors, Head of Regulatory Affairs and Quality Assurance, Senior Executives in Research and Development, Registration, Marketing and all departments that may be involved in Nasal Drug Delivery, or who wish to understand the potential of this alternative therapeutic route. Those already involved in Nasal Drug Delivery will benefit from updating their knowledge and sharing experiences with some of the leading practitioners in this field. If you are involved in Nasal Drug Delivery or are just considering the potential, this conference is an excellent route to understanding all aspects from the basic physiology through to launching a successful product.

THREE REASONS TO ATTEND THIS EVENT

1. Gain an update on the very latest scientific developments and technology advances in this field.
2. Hear from an unrivalled panel of expert speakers.
3. An excellent networking opportunity to build business relationships.

Day One

PROGRAMME

1 April 2009

- 09.30 ▶ Chairman's Welcome and Introduction
Professor Frans W H M Merkus, Leiden University and Innoscience Technology, Belgium
- 09.40 ▶ Anatomy and Physiology of the Nose and Sinuses
Professor Valerie Lund, University College Hospital, UK
- 10.20 ▶ The Future of Nasal Fentanyl: Pro and Cons of the Products Entering the Market
- What is breakthrough pain
 - Shortfall in current management
 - Role of transmucosal fentanyl
 - Pros and cons of current nasal preparations
- Dr. John Zeppetella, St Clare Hospice, UK

- 11.00 ▶ Discussion
- 11.10 ▶ Coffee
- 11.30 ▶ Nasal Drugs to Treat Nasal Disorders
- Allergies
 - Non-allergic Rhinitis
 - Acute and chronic Sinusitis
 - Polyps
- Professor Michael Benninger, The Cleveland Clinic, USA
- 12.10 ▶ Perspectives on Nasal Vaccine Delivery
- Product composition
 - Characterization
 - Immunogenicity
 - Protection
- Professor Anthony Hickey, University of North Carolina School of Pharmacy, USA
- 12.50 ▶ Discussion
- 13.00 ▶ Lunch
- 14.10 ▶ Nose to Brain Transport of Drugs – Does Deposition Matter?
- Dr Per Djupesland, OptiNose, Norway
- 14.40 ▶ Recent Findings in the Pharmacokinetics of Nasal Drugs
- Professor Ola Dale, Trondheim University, Norway
- 15.30 ▶ Discussion
- 15.40 ▶ Tea
- 16.00 ▶ Effective and Safe Excipients in Nasal Drug Delivery
- Prof Jean Paul Remon, University of Ghent, Belgium
- 16.40 ▶ Alternatives to Animal Testing for the Safety Evaluation of Nasal Drug Delivery Systems
- Brief introduction to the concept of alternatives to animal testing (3Rs)
 - Overview of alternative methods to assess irritation and mucosal damage of nasal drug formulations
 - Alternative method to predict clinical discomfort (e.g. stinging, itching and burning sensations)
- Dr Els Adriaens, University of Ghent and Adriaens Consulting, Belgium
- 17.20 ▶ Discussion
- 17.30 ▶ End of Day One

17.30 – 18.30 Drinks Reception for all Delegates and Speakers

- 09.15 ▶ Chairman's Welcome
Phil Seeney, PA Consulting, UK
- 09.30 ▶ Nasal Drug Delivery Systems
- The review will discuss the various options of nasal dispensing systems in terms of their applicability for an efficient nasal drug delivery
 - Nasal dispensing systems represent more than functional primary packaging
 - The presentation will cover the latest options in terms of the delivery devices and its relevant corresponding technical, analytical, regulatory and marketing issues
- Dr René Bommer, pharmAccel Consulting, Germany
- 10.10 ▶ If You Want to Get There I Wouldn't Start From Here. 'From Device Concept to Market – How Difficult Can it Be?'
David Howlett, Pharma Delivery Solutions, UK
- 10.50 ▶ Discussion
- 11.00 ▶ Coffee
- 11.30 ▶ Defining and Testing of Nasal Sprays from a Regulatory Perspective
Dr Julie Suman, Next Breath LLC, USA
- 12.10 ▶ CPS Nasal
New generation of nasal spray systems
Degenhard Marx, Ing. Erich Pfeiffer, Germany (invited)
- 12.50 ▶ Discussion
- 13.00 ▶ Lunch
- 14.10 ▶ Enhancing the In-Vitro Assessment of Nasal Sprays
- Analytical approaches to in-vitro characterisation
 - Expectations of the different markets
 - Correlating in-vivo assessment to real patient use
- Gerallt Williams, Valois Pharmaceutical Division, France
- 14.50 ▶ Intranasal Delivery of Dry Powder Vaccines
Intranasal vaccination has gained increased interest in recent years as a delivery route for new vaccines as it can provide superior protection at mucosal surfaces. This, in combination with the minimally invasive nature of the nasal vaccination route, makes intranasal delivery an attractive alternative to immunization via injection. Our data indicates that administration of certain vaccines to the nasal mucosa provides a means to achieve strong immune responses.
Vincent J. Sullivan, BD Technologies, USA.
- 15.30 ▶ New Nasal Sinus Drug Delivery Device
- Anatomic challenges of nasal aerosol delivery
 - Theory of "vibrating" or "sonic" aerosols
 - Requirements for efficient sinus drug delivery and their implementation in a new device
 - Results from a deposition and clearance study in volunteers and the clinical effect in CF patients
- Uwe Schuschnig, PARI Pharma GmbH, Germany
- 16.10 ▶ Chairman's Concluding Remarks
- 16.15 ▶ Close of Conference and Tea
