Cheminformatics for Drug Design: Data, Models and Tools

Wednesday 12 October 2016, Imperial War Museum, Duxford, UK

Synopsis

Cheminformatics is a dynamic and rapidly evolving field which is at the heart of modern drug design. This forum will allow medicinal chemists and scientists involved in drug design to meet and discuss the latest developments and best practices. Topics for discussion will include decision-making using data and models, drug design tools for medicinal chemists, software for sharing ideas and collaboration. The meeting will comprise a high quality programme of plenary lectures, plus both a poster session, and a commercial exhibition.
