Oral presentations & the discussions

We will be providing a computer onsite for your presentation; please download your talk onto a memory stick and copy it to the conference laptop before the start of the session.

You could also choose to use your own laptop. Please test it before your session start.

All delegates at the meeting, not just speakers, have the opportunity to make comments, ask questions, or present complementary or contradictory measurements and calculations during the discussion. If it is relevant to the topic, you may give a 5 minute presentation of your own work during the discussion. These remarks are published alongside the papers in the final volume and are fully citable. If you would like to present slides during the discussion please let the session chair know and load them onto the computer in the break before the start of the session.

A sample page of the recorded discussion a Faraday Discussion can be found as an attachment or by using the following link to an example of the published discussion for your reference
