CITATION

Why is the nominee deserving of the Early Career Award? Proposals may be from Academia, Government or Industry.

Emphasis should be given to the specific contribution and impact of the individual, even if part of a team, to national and international roles in the area of toxicology, including human and environmental health impacts.

Nominees should be early career scientists with typically no more than 10 years of full-time equivalent professional experience excluding career breaks.

Please support with evidence of published papers or articles or other documentary evidence, including contributions to conferences, seminars and exhibitions or key roles in cross organisation collaborations.

Applications will be assessed by an Awards Panel established as a sub-committee of the RSC Toxicology Group.

The citation should be no more than 500 words in total

What has been the nominee's key contribution to Toxicology?
What is the impact and applicability of this work?

A CV may also be attached for more complete details e.g. publications.
