Palladium’s main use is as a catalyst, in car catalytic converters and in some organic chemistry reactions.

Palladium is sometimes used to make professional (concert and classical) transverse flutes.

Palladium can absorb 900 times its own volume in H₂ gas and may be used for hydrogen fuel storage.