Gold compounds were used to treat arthritis; side effects and newer drugs have reduced this use.

Gold leaf and flakes are edible and added to a range of products including cakes, pastries and vodka.

Large quantities of gold are dissolved in the oceans – but too low a concentration for economic extraction.