

#103

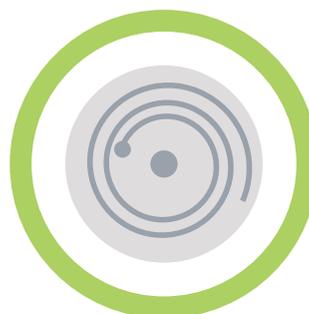

DISCOVERY

Credit for the discovery of lawrencium was given jointly to scientists from the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

NAME

Lawrencium is named after Ernest Lawrence, who invented the cyclotron particle accelerator.

SHORT-LIVED

Lawrencium is only made in miniscule amounts, and its most stable isotope has a half-life of just ten hours.