Supporting Information

High capacity Li[Ni_{0.8}Co_{0.06}Mn_{0.14}]O₂ positive electrode with two concentration-gradient for next generation Lithium-Ion Batteries

Kang-Joon Park¹, Byung-Beom Lim¹, Moon-Ho Choi¹, Hung-Gi Jung², Yang-Kook Sun^{1*}, Marta Haro³, Nuria Vicente³, Juan Bisquert^{3,4}, and Germà Garcia-Belmonte^{3*}

¹ Department of Chemical Engineering, Hanyang University, Seoul 133-791, South Korea

² Center for Energy Convergence, Korea Institute of Science and Technology, Seoul 136-791, South Korea

³ Institute of Advanced Materials (INAM), Universitat Jaume I, ES-12071 Castelló, Spain

⁴ Department of Chemistry, Faculty of Science, King Abdulaziz University, Jeddah 21589, Saudi Arabia

Figure SI.1. Cyclic voltammogram of TSFCG (blue) and CC (black) electrodes at $0.1 \text{mV} \cdot \text{s}^{-1}$, before (solid lines) and after (dot lines) of the impedance spectroscopy study.