

Enhanced thermoelectric properties of $\text{Pb}_{1-x}\text{Bi}_x\text{S}$ prepared with hydrothermal synthesis and microwave sintering

Xueli Du^{*a}, Rongna Shi^a, Ying Guo^a, Yuelong Wang^a, Yongchang Ma^{a, b}, and Zhihao Yuan^{a, b}

^aSchool of Materials Science & Engineering, Tianjin University of Technology, Tianjin 300384, China

^bTianjin Key Lab for Photoelectric Materials & Devices, Tianjin University of Technology, Tianjin 300384, China

SUPPORTING INFORMATION

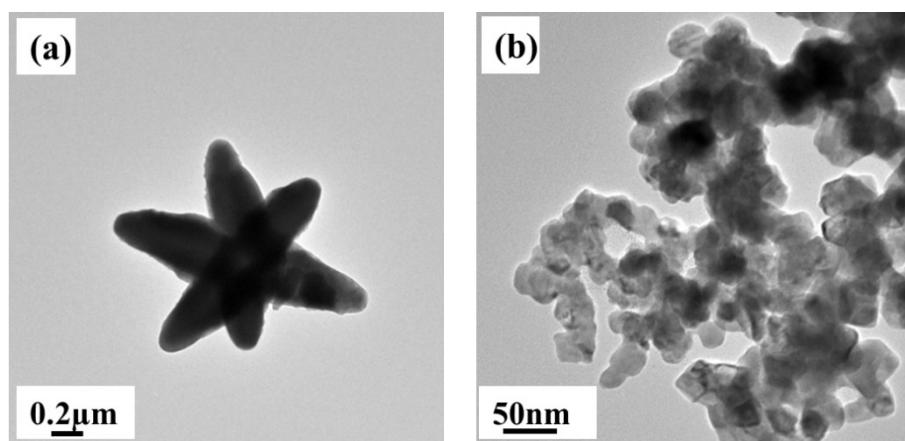

Fig. S1 TEM image of hydrothermally synthesized PbS powder, (a) primary star-shaped structure; (b) secondary nano particles

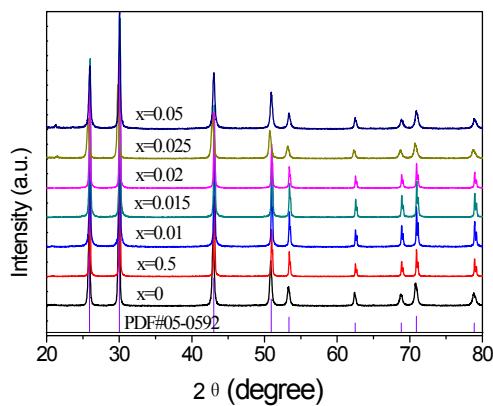

Fig. S2 XRD patterns of hydrothermally synthesized powders for $\text{Pb}_{1-x}\text{Bi}_x\text{S}$ ($x=0, 0.005, 0.01, 0.015, 0.02, 0.025, 0.05$)

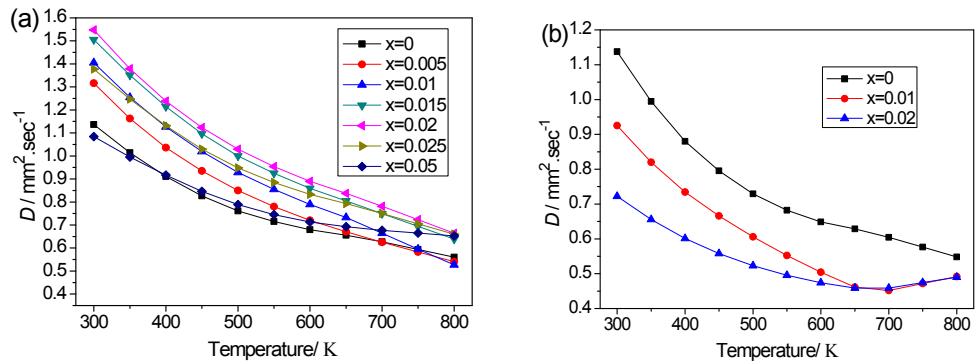

Fig. S3 Temperature dependence of thermal conductivity for microwave (a) and PAS (b) sintered $\text{Pb}_{1-x}\text{Bi}_x\text{S}$ samples ($x=0-0.05$)

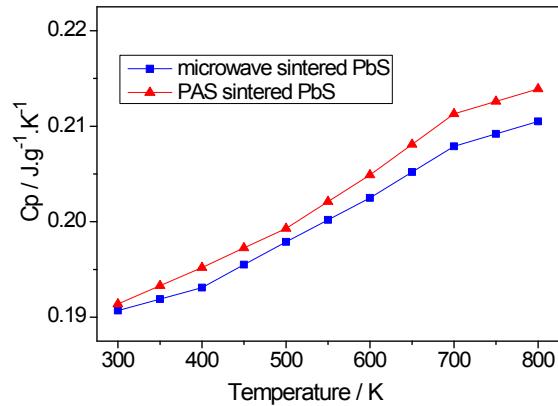

Fig. S4 C_p of microwave and PAS sintered PbS samples

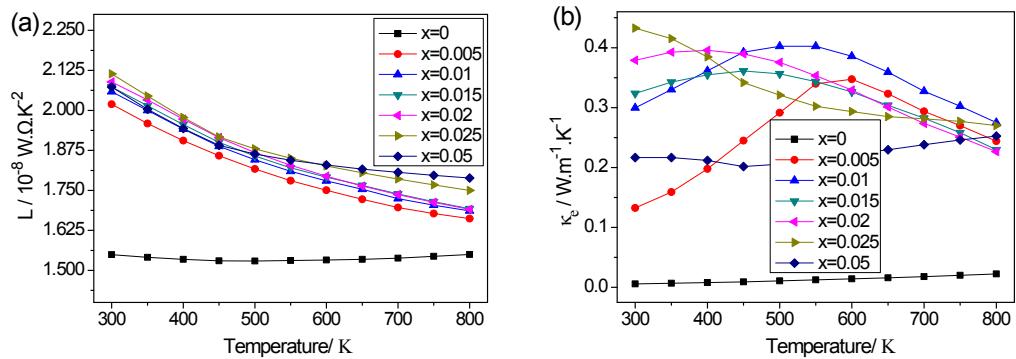

Fig. S5 The Lorenz number (a) and electric thermal conductivity (b) for microwave sintered $\text{Pb}_{1-x}\text{Bi}_x\text{S}$ samples ($x=0, 0.005, 0.01, 0.015, 0.02, 0.025, 0.05$)

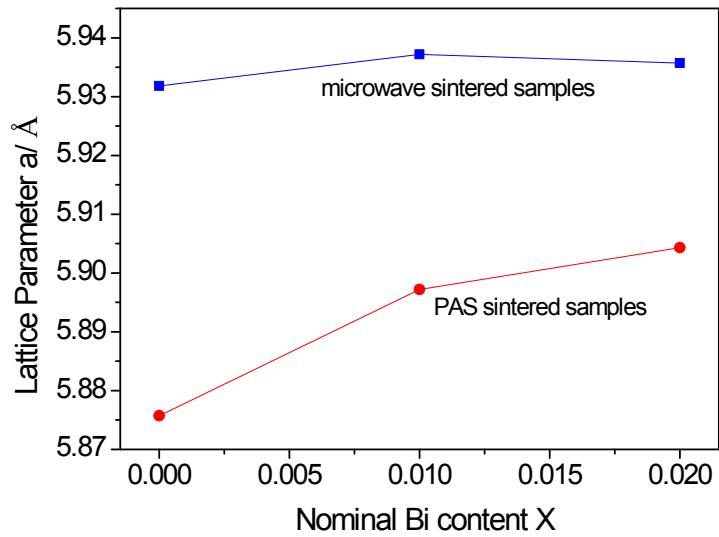

Fig. S6 Lattice parameters of microwave and PAS sintered $\text{Pb}_{1-x}\text{Bi}_x\text{S}$ samples ($x=0, 0.01, 0.02$)

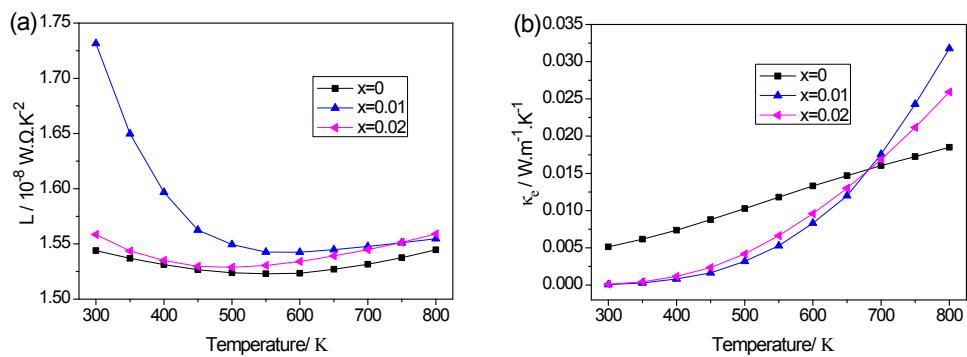

Fig. S7 The Lorenz number (a) and electric thermal conductivity (b) for PAS sintered $\text{Pb}_{1-x}\text{Bi}_x\text{S}$ samples ($x=0, 0.01, 0.02$)