

Effective enhancement of the creep resistance in isotactic polypropylene by elevated concentrations of DMDBS

Chenfei Jia^a, Xia Liao^{a*}, Jingjun Zhu^b, Zhu An^b, Qi Yang^a, Guangxian Li^{a*}

^a College of Polymer Science and Engineering, State Key Laboratory of Polymer Materials Engineering, Sichuan University, Chengdu, Sichuan 610065, China

^b Key Laboratory of Radiation Physics and Technology of Ministry of Education, Institute of Nuclear Science and Technology, Sichuan University, Chengdu, Sichuan 610064, China

Supplementary content

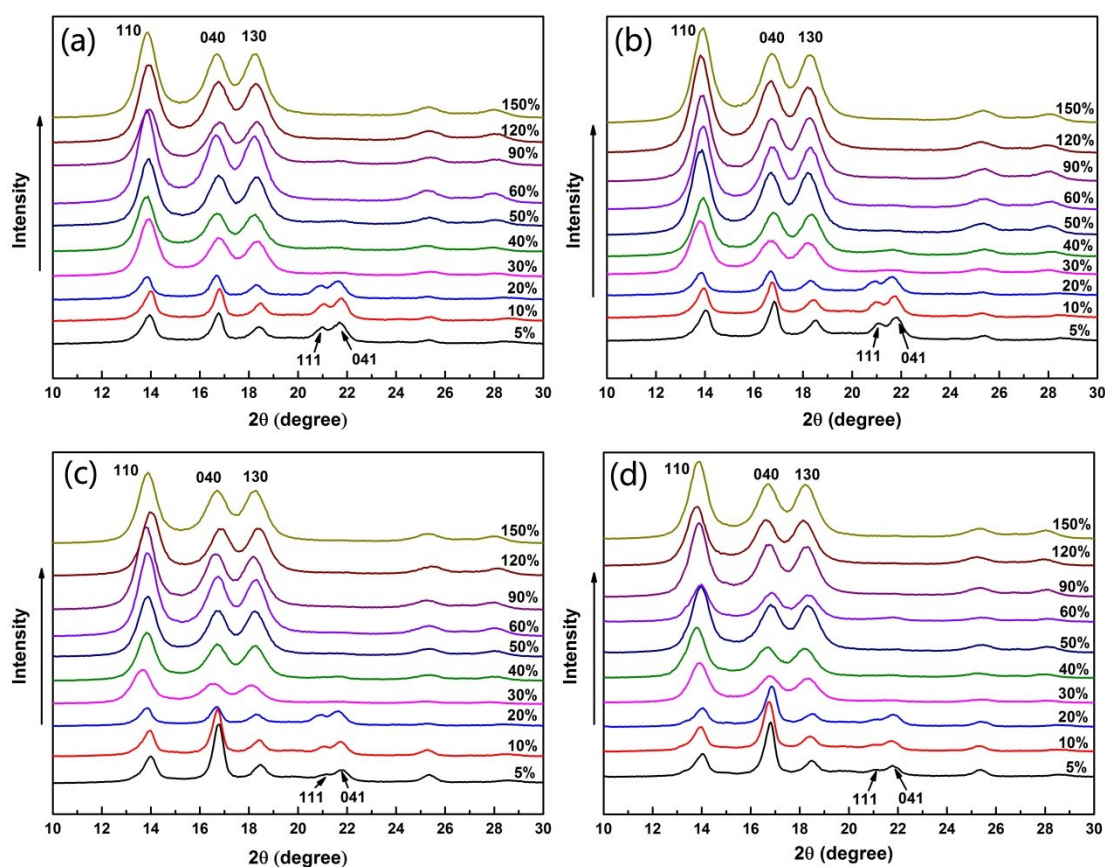

Figure S1 WAXD patterns of (a) iPP/0.1NA, (b) iPP/0.2NAB, (c) iPP/0.4NA and (d) iPP/1.0NA samples (stretched) obtained at different strains as indicated on the graphs.

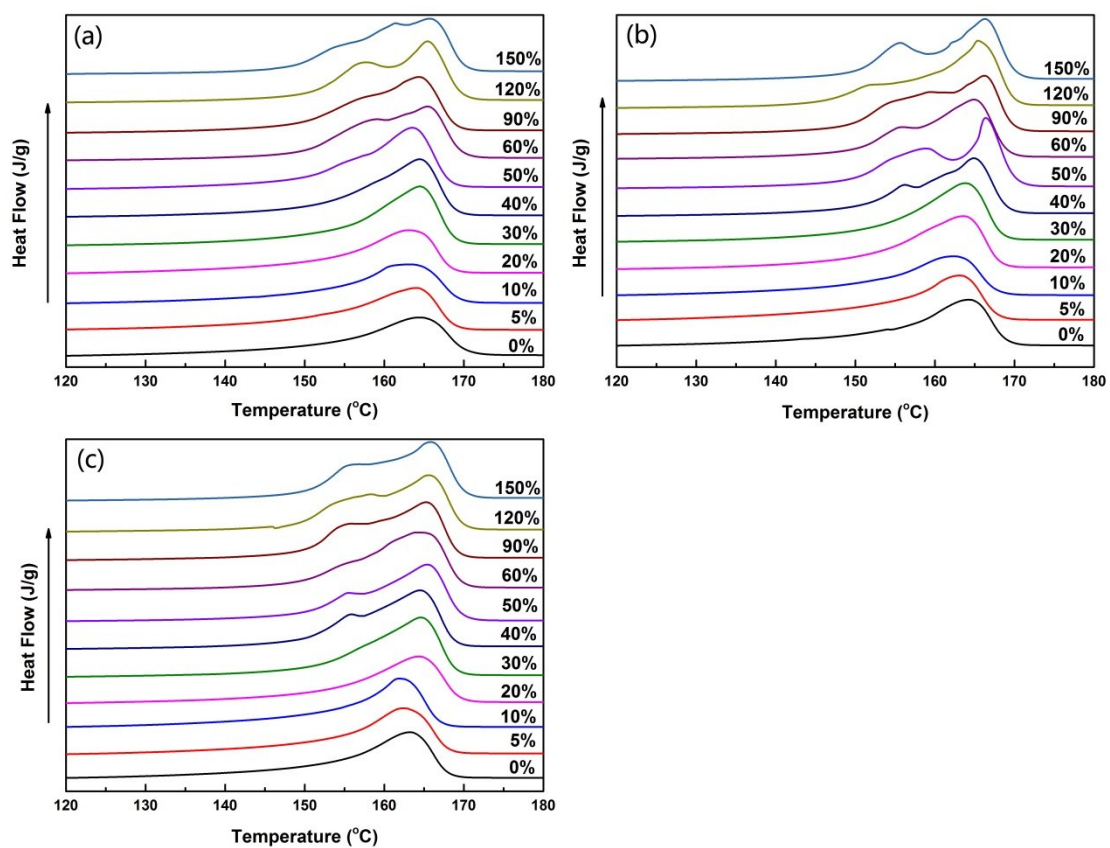

Figure S2 DSC melting curves of (a) iPP/0.1NA, (b) iPP/0.2NAB and (c) iPP/0.4NA samples obtained at different strains as indicated on the graphs.