Electronic Supplementary Material (ESI) for Soft Matter.

Supplementary Information

Crystallization Behaviour of Poly (ethylene oxide) Under Confinement in Electrospun Nanofibers of Polystyrene/Poly(ethylene oxide) Blends

Pratick Samanta,[a] Thangapandian V,[a] Sajan Singh,[a] Rajiv Srivastava,[a] *Bhanu Nandan,[a] Chien-Liang Liu[b], Hsin-Lung Chen,[b*]

[a] Department of Textile Technology, Indian Institute of Technology Delhi, Hauz Khas, New Delhi 110016 (India). E-mail: nandan@textile.iitd.ac.in

[b] Department of Chemical Engineering, National Tsing-Hua University, Hsinchu 30013 (Taiwan)

* Corresponding author: nandan@textile.iitd.ac.in, hlchen@che.nthu.edu.tw

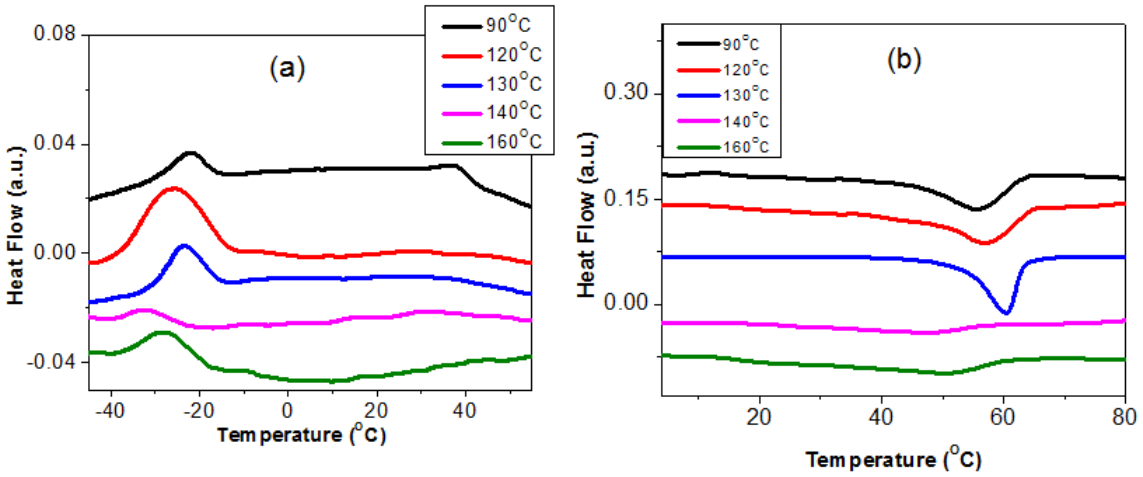

Figure S1. DSC cooling (a) and heating (b) curves of S8/E2 electrospun nanofiber blends after thermal treatment of the samples at different melt annealing temperatures (T_a).

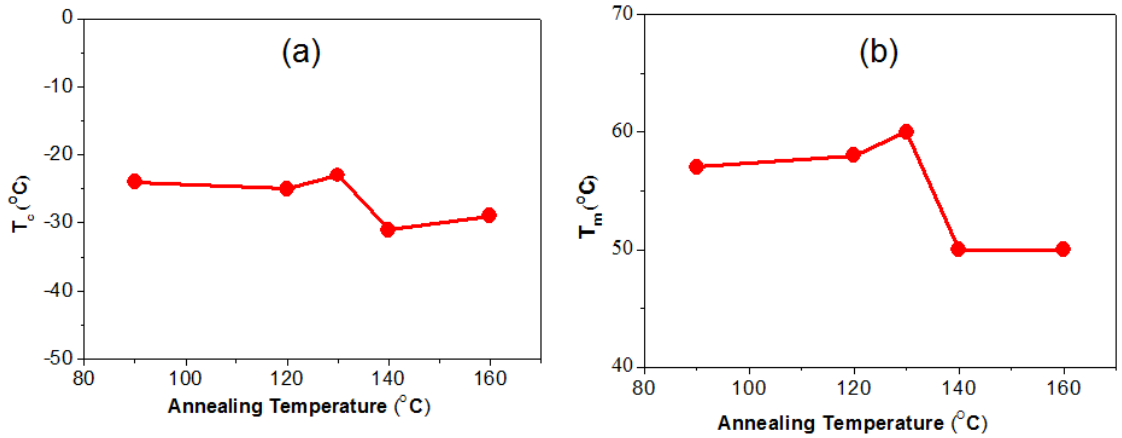

Figure S2. Variation of different thermal properties for S8/E2 electrospun nanofiber blends with melt annealing temperature (T_a), as ascertained from DSC measurements, (a) melt crystallization temperature (T_c); (b) crystalline melting temperature (T_m).

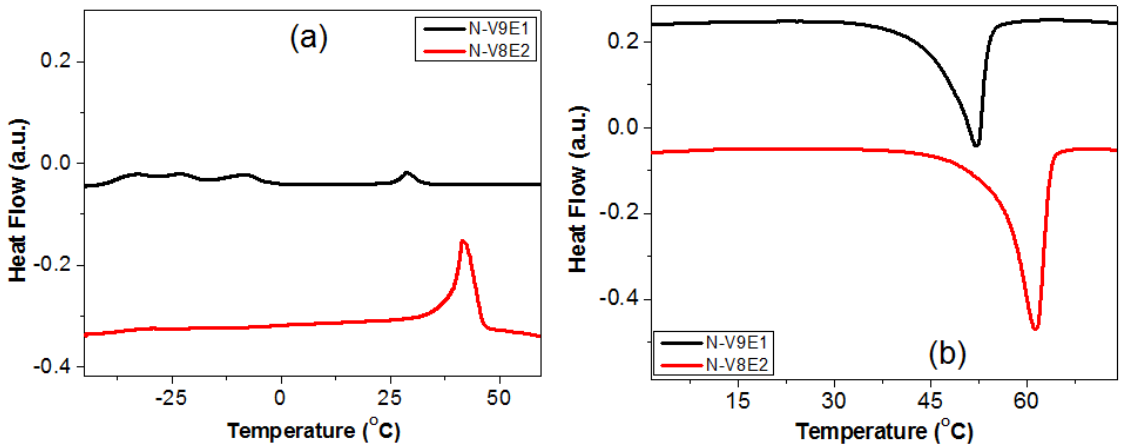

Figure S3. DSC cooling (a) and heating (b) curves of P4VP/PEO (90/10) (N-V9E1) and P4VP/PEO (80/20) (N-V8E2) blend nanofibers after first heating upto 90°C.

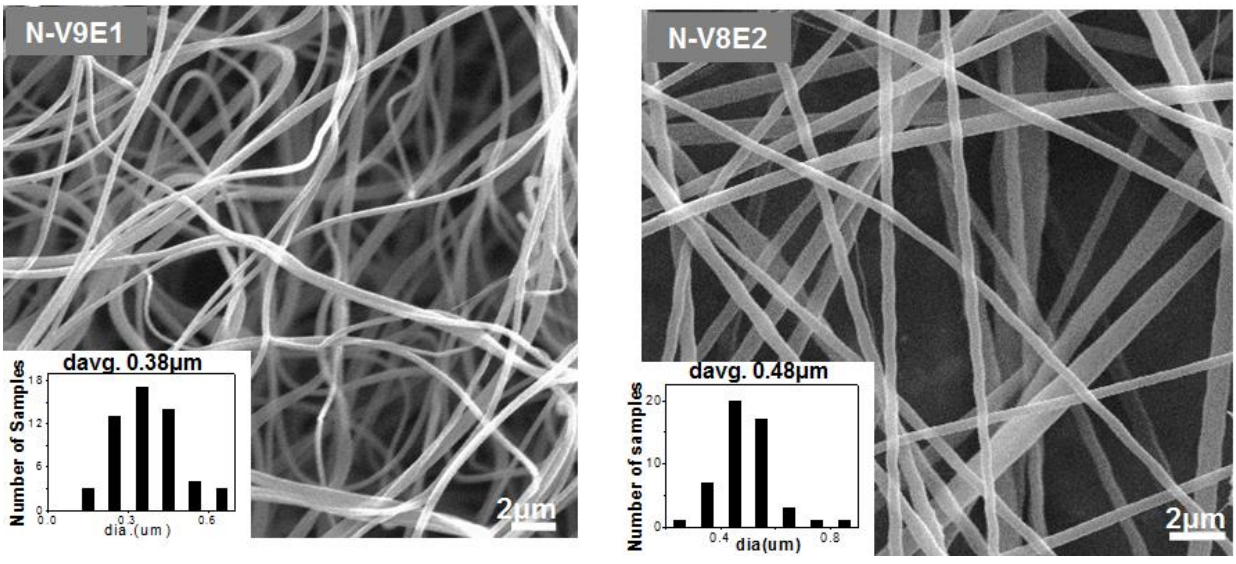

Figure S4. SEM micrographs of electrospun P4VP/PEO blend nanofibers (a) N-V9E1; (b); N-V8E2