

Supplementary Information

Double-sided 3D printing on paper towards mass production of three-dimensional paper-based microfluidic analytical devices (3D- μ PADs)

Chanyong Park^a, Yong Duk Han^b, Han Vit Kim^c, Jinkee Lee^c, Hyun C. Yoon^b and Sungsu Park^{c*}

^a*Department of Biomedical Engineering, Sungkyunkwan University, Suwon 16419, Korea.*

^b*Department of Molecular Science & Technology, Ajou University, Suwon 16499, Korea*

^c*School of Mechanical Engineering, Sungkyunkwan University, Suwon 16419, Korea. E-mail: nanopark@skku.edu*

Corresponding author: S. Park. School of Mechanical Engineering, Sungkyunkwan University, Seoburo, Jangan-gu, Suwon, Kyunggi-do 16419, Korea/E-mail: nanopark@skku.edu/Tel: +82-31-290-7431/Fax: +82-31-290-5889*

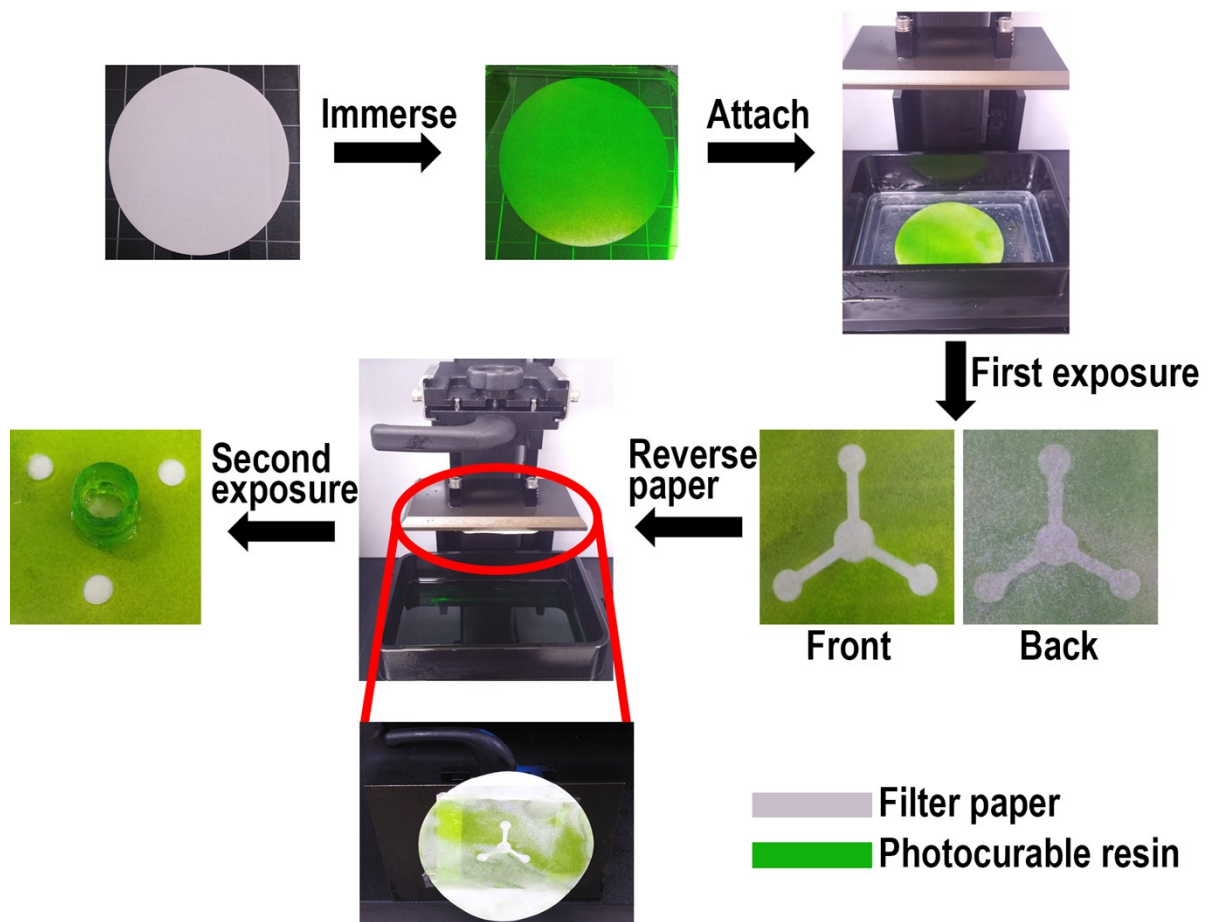

Fig. S1. 3D printing processes for double-sided patterning on the filter paper.

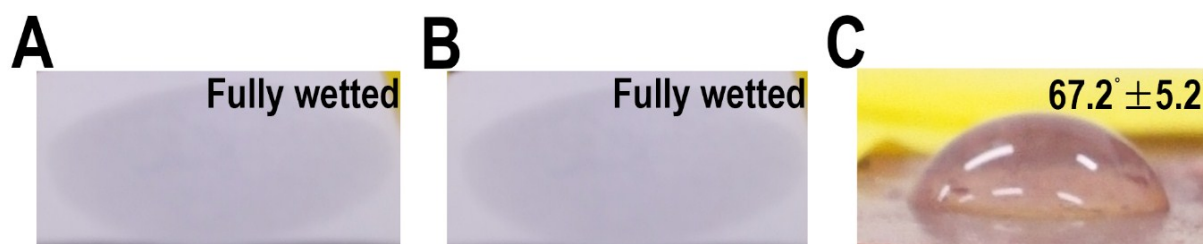

Fig. S2. Water drops on the paper (A), paper after removing the printed resin (B) and paper with the printed resin (C).