

Appendix Figure 1. Particle size distribution for sample powders after different milling times determined by a BT-9300ST laser particle size analysis system. The red line indicates the differential distribution, a measure of the percentage of particle content that falls between two adjacent particle sizes. The blue line represents the cumulative particle size distribution, showing the total percentage of particle size.

