

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION

Hydroxide-Promoted Transformation of Fluorotelomer Carboxylic Acids at Ambient Temperature

Liliya Chernysheva,^a Elizabeth G. Curtis,^a Zunhui Lin,^b and Kyle Doudrick^{a*}

^aDepartment of Civil and Environmental Engineering and Earth Sciences, University of Notre Dame, Notre Dame, Indiana 46556, United States

^bIra A. Fulton Schools of Engineering, Arizona State University, Tempe, AZ 85287-3005, United States

Corresponding author's emails and addresses:

Kyle Doudrick

kdoudrick@nd.edu

Department of Civil and Environmental Engineering and Earth Sciences, University of Notre Dame, Notre Dame, Indiana 46556, United States

Revision Date: 03/15/26

Journal: Environmental Science: Processes and Impacts

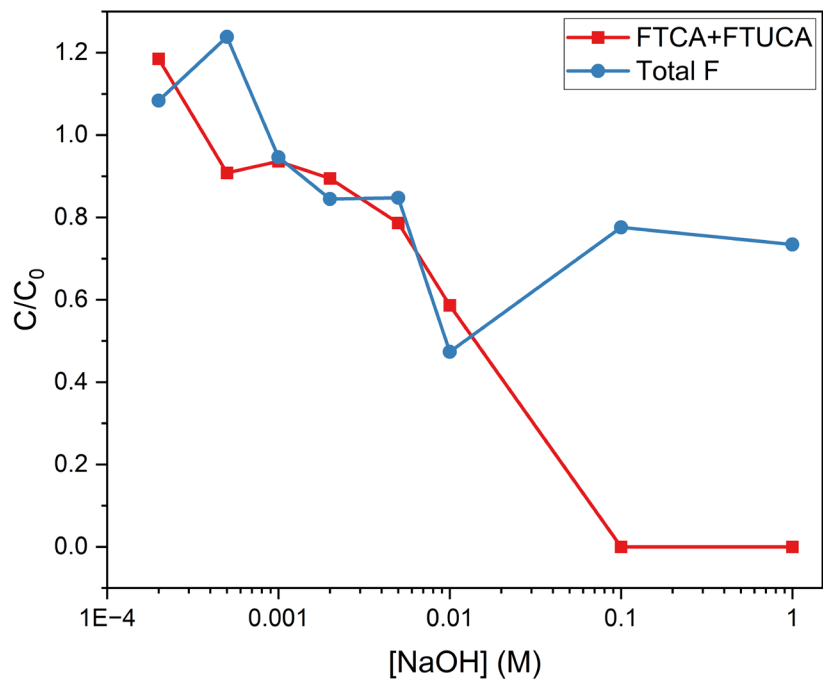

Figure S1. Normalized concentration of 6:2 FTCA+6:2 FTUCA and total F (measured by CIC) as a function of the NaOH concentration at equilibrium after 14 days in solution.