

A novel reprogrammable magnetic continuum robot (RMCR) utilizes the phase transition of a low-melting-point alloy for real-time magnetic torque reprogramming. This dynamic optimization enables complex multi-shape deformations, precise obstacle capture, and targeted drug delivery within complex minimally invasive surgical environments.