Bridging silicon nanoparticles and thermoelectrics: phenylacetylene functionalization

Shane P. Ashby,¹ Jason Thomas,¹ Jorge García-Cañadas,² Gao Min,² Jack Corps,³ Anthony V. Powell,³ Hualong Xu,⁴ Wei Shen⁴ and Yimin Chao*,¹

¹School of Chemistry, University of East Anglia, Norwich NR4 7TJ, UK Fax: +441603592003; Tel: +441603593146

²School of Engineering, Cardiff University, Cardiff CF24 3AA, UK

³Institute of Chemical Sciences, Heriot Watt University, Edinburgh EH14 4AS, UK ⁴Advance Materials Laboratory, Department of Chemistry, Fudan University, Shanghai 200433, P. R. China

*Corresponding author: Y.Chao@uea.ac.uk

ENERGY DISPERSIVE X-RAY SPECTROSCOPY (EDX)

SI Figure 1: EDX spectrum for phenylacetylene capped SiNPs- lower levels of oxygen were observed compared with XPS result.